The Directors urgently invite all parties to peruse the Rules and Tables of the Society. To those who have not studied the subject, it will appear almost marvellous, how small savings frugally, and in time amount to considerable sums.

Small sums, which from their apparent insignificance, are frequently wasted or spent in extravagance, would, if invested in Life Assurance, suffice to provide for a widow and fatherless children, or would purchase a deferred annuity, which would insure a comfortable retirement in old age.

It will be seen by Table A, that a person twenty years of age paying £1 17s. 8d. per annum (which is about 8½d. per week) will have £100 cash to leave to his widow, children, or others at his death; (it will be seen by Table C, that the payments of 1s. per week, by a person twenty years of age, would entitle him at the age of fifty to about £11 a year; at sixty to about £27; or at seventy to about £20 a year, so long as he shall live.

Nothing can justify any individual in presuming upon the duration of his own life, and so, spending to penury and want, those for whom by the most sacred obligations, he is bound to provide; as experience mournfully proves that the best life is uncertain. Nor can any individual be justified in exposing himself to be a burden, in his old age on his children, or to become a pauper, or to ask for charity, when, by a little foresight and exertion, the night of his declining years may be to the enjoyment of a comfortable income.

Bonuses.—The Table D and E, show the easy terms on which sums of money may be secured for children, payable when they attain the age of fourteen or twenty years. The following are some of the advantages offered by this Society:—

1. Cheap Assurance to Persons in Health.—The Tables having been formed from the best and oldest established English Companies, which have been tested for many years.

2. All the Profits go to the Members.—Some idea may be formed of the enormous profits realised by Life Assurance Companies, from the fact that where £1000 was assured in a Company established like this, on the Mutual Principle in England, the family of a member had to receive upwards of three times the amount, or £3000 at his death.

3. Loans will be made to the assured on the Policies of Life Assurance and Deferred Annuities to the extent of half the amount of the premium paid; so that a policy will be as good as a bank note to the assured whenever he may require cash. In case of death before the Deferred Annuity commences, one-half the premium paid will be returned to the family of the deceased.

4. This Society possesses the general privilege of a Chartered Company, and the entire freedom from all personal liability on the part of the members.

5. The assured are all members, and entitled to vote at the General Meetings of the Society, and the election of the Officers.

7. The utmost economy is exercised in the management, and the convenience of Members has been studied in allowing the payments to be made by instalments.

The Rules and Tables of the Rates of Premium, and forms of application for Assurance, may be obtained on application to the Secretary or Agents, who will also give any further information that may be required.

TO MERCHANTS, SETTLERS, AND CARRIERS.

MR. JAMES STEWART begs to return thanks to his numerous friends for the liberal support he has uniformly received, during the period of his occupancy of THE WOOLPACK INN, and trusts that unceasing endeavours to give satisfaction in every branch of his trade, will secure him the continuance of a fair share of public patronage.

In addition to the ordinary routine of business, at the suggestion of several individuals, he has built a new and roomy store with the commission of packages have repeatedly experienced most vexatious loss and disappointment, Mr. Stewart purposes opening at his establishment a where the payment of a small sum for entry will go far to facilitate its speedy delivery, at any inland destination within the customary precincts of land carriage.

Also, will be attached to the premises

AN EMIGRANTS REGISTRATION OFFICE,

where heavy goods will be securely stored upon a merely nominal Commission, all an opportunity offers for forwarding them according to directions, and as the extensive Yards of the WOOLPACK have long been known as the great central rendezvous of up-country teams, but a trifling delay can ever occur previous to such an opportunity being afforded.

Carriers arriving from the country will find it desirable to address at the above Offices, as every exertion will be used to supply them with loading; and the tediousness and uncertainty and expense now attending their stay in Sydney almost wholly avoided.

From having been closely connected in business with by far the largest number of the town drivers upon the road during the last seven or eight years, Mr. Stewart has become sufficiently acquainted with the individual characters of the men to be enabled to form a tolerably just conclusion as to who amongst them are the most trustworthy, Merchants and others sending valuable goods will thus be, to a measure, relieved from the anxiety and apprehension which must be felt when property is entrusted, (as is often the case,) to persons wholly unknown to them.

Mr. Stewart further begs to intimate, that parties favouring him with the disposal of any kind of Stock or country produce, may rest upon his speciality being excited in securing the best possible price, and immediately appointing the proceeds according to the wishes of his principals.

N.B. On Hand, the usual stock of Wines, Brandies, Rums, both in and out of bond; also a small quantity of RUSSELL'S PATENT ECONOMICAL ROASTING AND CHARCOAL STOVES.

THE undersigned begs to intimate that he has received by late arrivals, a large assortment of materials requisite for the manufacture of the above celebrated stoves, which he trusts will enable him to complete his orders for them with greater despatch than hitherto.

The fact of their superiority over any other description of cooking stoves is proved by the continual demand for them, and the recommendations of those parties who are already supplied.

Every improvement is now combined in them, they are gotup and finished in the best style of workmanship, and the prices fixed very as low as articles of their quality can possibly be manufactured for.

The roasting stoves are made expressly to consume either common coal, coke, or charcoal, and do not heat more than from two to three shillings per week for fuel.

LATER ENGLISH NEWS.

English news to the 3rd January came to hand by the Velocity, via Adelaide and Launceston. For the following summary we are principally indebted to the Launceston Examiner.

Parliament was prorogued to 4th February, when it was expected the legislature would certainly meet for the despatch of business.

The Times of 1st January says:—

Consols have closed to-day within a fraction of four per cent. above their price on the 1st of January last, when, with the exception of Italy, Europe was in a state of profound repose, and the worst casualty anticipated by the speculators was the possible death of Louis Philippe! The bullion in the Bank is £2,600,000 in excess of that period, and within about a million of its highest point preceding the madness of 1846, while the banking reserve has increased £3,400,000, and is nearly half a million higher than at any period since the passing of the Bank Charter Act.

On 3rd January consols at $89\frac{1}{8}$ $\frac{1}{4}$, declined to 89, and $88\frac{7}{8}$, and are now 89 to $89\frac{1}{8}$.

The wheat average for the six weeks ending 29th December, 1848, was 49s. 7d. per quarter. There had been a gradual decline of prices, and the highest figure for wheat at Mark-lane on January 1st was 57s.

There was a decided upward tendency in the wool market, and an early notice of some marked improvements in prices may be confidently expected.

It was understood that the Government intended to bring forward a grand emigration scheme. The Times was opposing it, on the ground that without any Government assistance a sufficient stream of population was leaving England. The Times remarks—

There is scarcely any branch of British manufacture which has not lately experienced a beneficial reaction or prosperous impulse from the late convulsions in continental Europe. The recent disturbances in France were likely to conduce to a most important event—namely, the removal of the fancy silk trade from Paris and Lyons to England.

The Leeds Mercury states—

That there were several parties in Coventry, Manchester, and London, recently arrived from Paris and London as pioneers; and, from information that might be relied upon, there was every reason to believe that several establishments would forthwith be removed to England.

A series of robberies of the most extraordinary and extensive character were perpetrated on the up and down mails traversing the Great Western Railway in one night. On the arrival of the train at Bristol shortly before midnight, the guard went to the tender in the rear of the post office, in order to deliver the Bristol bags, when to his astonishment and dismay, he discovered that all the bags had been more or less tampered with, some being cut open, and others left with the seals broken and strings untied. A very cursory examination of their contents satisfied him that all the money or registered letters, as well as the bankers' parcels, had been abstracted. The guard was quite positive the bags were safe when the train left Bridgewater, and as no stoppage had taken place between that town and the city of Bristol, it was evident that the robbery must have been effected by some parties travelling by the train, and while it was in motion.

A tolerably keen electioneering contest was proceeding at Leominster, where Sir E. B. Lytton and Mr. Peel, jun., represent the conservative whigs and liberal conservatives. The Hon. E. H. Stanley has been elected as Lord George Bentinck's successor at Lynn.

The Earl of Oxford died in December; and the Earl of Auckland, First Lord of the Admiralty, expired on the 31st of the same month.

The foreign news contained no item of special importance. The presentations to the President of the French Republic at the Palace of the Elysée National on New Year's Day, were so numerous that the rooms were insufficient to hold the concourse of visitors, and in many instances the ceremony of presentation took place in the garden. As those citizens who were officers or sub-officers in the national guard had been invited to present themselves in uniform, and as almost all persons in a position to visit the President held that rank, the assemblage, with the exception of a few dozen persons, was in uniform. The officers of the line being invited at the same time, the aspect of the place was as brilliant as could be imagined. Before three o'clock there could not have been less than 1500 persons in the garden. Instead of passing, as usual, before the President, they were drawn up in two ranks, with an intervening space between, along which the President, attended by the minister of the interior, his aides-de-camp and suite, passed. There was no individual presentation, nor any interchange of words between the President and his visitors.

The Prussians have received a constitution. After the parliament, especially convoked for the single purpose of deciding on such an act, has succeeded only in bringing the kingdom into a state of ferment, and after their revolutionary spirit had been manifested, and their traitorous resistance avowed, the reaction came and gathered strength; the parliament was dissolved, and the king at the same time published a constitution, octroyée, as they have termed it, which, however, is found to be liberal even beyond the programme of the more advanced party, and with no more of the restraining power than is evidently necessary to an equipoise.

In an interview with the King of Naples, Mr. Temple urged his Majesty to proceed in a much more liberal course than he intended towards his Sicilian subjects, and the King replied—

Mr. Temple, I will pledge myself to follow step by step in Sicily whatever measures your government shall set before me in Ireland. If you withdraw your troops from thence, I will order mine to quit Sicily. If you leave Ireland to the defence of native troops, I will do the same for Sicily, and every measure of liberal policy that you shall pursue in Ireland, where there is no large party in arms, and no fortified town in the hands of rebels, I will follow you in Sicily, where there are both. If you will not accept such terms, will you follow my example, and avoid any further interference between sovereign and subject, until I presume to direct your course with regard to the people of Ireland?

The Times of 3rd January has some admirable remarks on the California gold country:—

What chiefly leads one to suspect that even the vast gold-field of California may follow the fate of its predecessors in the old world, is, that the form in which the mineral appears is the same as of yore; virgin gold in flakes, grains, and occasionally in larger pieces, chaorily diffused over the soil, and brought to light in ravines, gulleys, and watercourses. It looks the old story all over again. This does not augur inexhaustible abundance. Experience is equally against the presumption that California, be its treasures great or small, will prove a real benefit to the United States. The invariable fate of the finder of hidden treasure, or the pauper heir, has often come to pass with nations. Gold-hunting, whether pursued by the solitary Indian, or the great commercial company, is not one of those branches of ordinary and legitimate trade which train men to useful arts and steady habits, and so draw down a blessing on society, even when they fail. It is mere gambling—an unhealthy flush of prosperity, indisposing the population for regular industry, and entailing a subsequent collapse of national energy, and, to some extent, of the national independence.

We conclude with the following retrospective remarks from the Times of January 3:—

The year 1848 opened gloomily enough. The Continent, it is true, was apparently tranquil. The diplomatic combats in one peninsula, and the liberal movements in another, threatened no very serious influence upon European prosperity, nor was the calm of the political horizon actually disturbed in any quarter excepting the insular dominions of the Neapolitan Sovereign. Yet, notwithstanding this absence of any definite or palpable portent, misgivings of the future were serious in the extreme. The critical state of Ireland—all intrinsic impulse apart—the discovered rottenness of many parts of our commercial system, the known deficiency in the revenue, the experience of one famine and the apprehensions of a second, were circumstances sufficient, under an ordinary aspect of political affairs, to induce gloom and mistrust in abundance. Well, indeed, is it that the future is concealed from our view. Could the revolutions of Europe been then prognosticated, what would have been the sentiments of those who, even as things stood, were inclined to despair of the coming year! and what would have been thought of the audacious prophet who should have foretold that, after the accomplishment of the Irish rebellion under auspices unusually promising to democratic madness, and after the revolutionary convulsion of the whole Continent from Paris to Palermo, the year 1849 would commence with the constitution and credit of our country more immovably established than ever, and with Consols at 4 per cent. above their opening price in the year 1848?

We have but to be true to ourselves. The experience of a year unlikely to be parallelled as a touchstone of national stability has abundantly proved that nothing but our own madness can impede our progress despite the suicidal revolutions of neighbouring states. Within the last six weeks trade has improved in our northern districts, consols have advanced, money has become abundant, and the bank stores have increased, although three European capitals out of four were in a state either of anarchy or siege, and although an electoral revolution in France was described as portending both civil and foreign war. If we are but wise, our gain upon the year will be far greater than our loss. Our system of commerce has been purified, our system of currency tested, and a spirit of legitimate enterprise substituted for an unnatural frenzy of speculation. We are fortunate, not only in cheering prospects of trade, but in the far more precious acquisition of a temper to estimate and improve them properly. The former advantage is one which any year might bring with it; the latter, one which could only follow upon the trials of such a year as the last.

We believe we have noticed every item of importance in the papers before us.

In the observations which we have felt it to be our duty from time to time to make on the erratic course of Dr. Lang, we have held chiefly, and, as we thought, clearly in view the question respecting the degree of good faith and sound judgment manifested by the Doctor in his proceedings. In other words, the degree of reliance to be placed in future on his assurances. Everybody seems now disposed to concede, that in the actual shipment of emigrants, per Fortitude, and in the contemplated shipment by future vessels unnamed, he has been distinguished by the same restless selfwill and vainglory, the same arrogant contempt of wholesome authority, the same childish ignorance of the most ordinary and useful rules of business for which he was formerly notorious. Personal animosity towards the Doctor we have none—our private walks lie as entirely distinct as, for the most part, our public principles do. But while we are called to animadvert upon his public misdoings, we cannot altogether overlook the transparent personal motives by which he is excited to the various strange vagaries he performs before high heaven.

A contemporary has attempted to turn aside the edge of our former censure by enlarging on the great advantages which will accrue to the colony by the introduction of the class of small capitalists, of whom some have come out in the Fortitude, and it is assumed a further supply is to come in the Doctor's other ships. As we have expressly admitted that the importation by the Fortitude has been a cheap bargain to the colony at the price paid for them, (namely the expense incurred for their finding and medical attendance in quarantine,) and as we are disposed to hail the arrival of this description of people generally, we might content ourselves with merely remarking that we see no reason why such of them as come in Dr. Lang's ships should have their passages free, or should have their lands at the minimum price, any more than such of them as come in other ships. That portion of the public bounty which is devoted to immigration has after due deliberation been determined to be applicable for the present only to certain useful labourers whose presence is essential and urgently required, and who cannot pay their own passages. But we have no need to confine ourselves to this. We undertake to show that the manner in which Dr. Lang has conducted this emigration will prove positively injurious to the interests of the colony, while a little common sense might have conferred upon it the greatest value which such an experiment can possess. Dr Lang has buoyed up these small capitalists with false hopes—he has told them that they should have land of their own selection at the minimum price, as well as a remission in the purchase money to the extent of their passage moneys—and he has exaggerated the ease and the gains of their cotton growing. If we should say that he did this wilfully, and in knowledge of the practical delays and difficulties to be encountered by an unskilled settler on new land, we know not that we should be blamed. The Doctor could not but have known such things were. We find at least that he had early warning from the authorities that if he persisted in his designs, he should do so without any of the boons and bounties he demanded. Yet he did persist in these designs, without informing his dupes of the adverse official determination.

The first thing which these small capitalists would do when released from quarantine would be, no doubt, to write home to their friends in Britain (other small capitalists, eagerly waiting for information, which might encourage them also to follow), that the Doctor had deceived them, that the Government, although it had been kind to them at their first landing, was extremely illiberal on the Land Question, that nobody knew anything of cotton growing, that at best a world of time and cash would be lost before a cotton plant could be reared, that the land was all bush, and quite different from Dr. Lang's paradise, no houses, no gardens, no hedges or fences, no ploughed fields, and that the flattering statements made by itinerant lecturers from the colony were not to be believed. This is the natural language of the disappointed. As unjust in the other direction as the delusive representations of which it complains. The consequence of the complaints will be to deter small capitalists from emigrating hither in future.

We may grant that small capitalists are a desirable class of immigrants. But that is not the question. Labour is the present great desideratum, and these persons are employers of labour. To introduce them at the expense of the land fund is in two ways to shorten our means for the introduction of labour. Nor would it operate well to the small capitalist himself—without hands to work his land, and apply his capital, they would be of no use to him. This, we have no doubt, the small capitalists by the Fortitude have begun already to feel. Let labourers be introduced in sufficient numbers, and they will either become small capitalists by industry and saving, or the more reasonable price of labour, and improved market for produce, will attract small capitalists in due time.

The various and rather unsatisfactory sources of emigration which seem about to be opened, and which we have recently described, render it more needful that the colony should in the administration of its emigration fund adhere strictly to the principles by which the eligibility of emigrants has for some years been tested. Any deviation which has been made from these principles—not even excepting that in the case of the recently introduced orphans—has but proved by the contrast of its unsatisfactory effect, the soundness of the system for some years acted on. From a laudable desire to promote colonization, some relaxations have taken place at the instance both of the Home and the Colonial Officers; but they have not tended either to relieve the pressure on employers or to satisfy the desires of the immigrants in whose favour they were made. Persons, not answering the descriptions of labourers eligible for bounty passages, do not easily or willingly (on failing to get the species of employment to which they have been used) betake themselves to a different occupation, however nearly allied to the other it may seem. Hence the towns swarm with hawkers, light porters, clerks of an inferior grade, and jobber with no defined skill in anything.

Dr. Lang, however, so far as he is likely to carry his projects into effect at all, would contravene these good rules for the distribution of the colonisation fund. His other more extended projects, if we may judge of such vague things, appear to assume an entire alteration of the law as to Land Sales. All efforts to obtain any such alteration have been hitherto ineffectual, and hence we can look upon the Doctor's schemes in the mean time as but idle, senseless, frivolous, vexatious, and unprofitable speculations.

Those persons who laud Dr. Lang's magnificent views would do well to delineate them; to point out their skilful construction, and their practicability. From the reverend gentleman himself, we only learn that negotiations are in favourable progress (which we take leave to doubt) for obtaining two Royal Charters of Incorporation for the colonization of the important tracts of country misnamed by him Cooksland and Phillipsland, on the same principle that the upper end of Jamison-street rejoices in the appellation of College-street. But these fine sounding phrases do not deceive men of any experience. We know that the day for Royal Charters of Incorporation, conveying any exclusive privileges of the smallest consequence, is gone by. The utmost that can now be obtained is the privilege of suing and being sued, a privilege which settlers do not much value. We venture to predict that the Doctor's Petitions will be returned to him loaded with adverse commentaries by the Board of Trade, the Land and Emigration Commissioners, and the Secretary for the Colonies, with a civil intimation that the usual facilities will be afforded to persons desirous of emigrating to those favoured regions; but that the usual conformity of those persons to the Emigration Rules, and the usual rule of competition by auction for the land, cannot be dispensed with. Hundreds and thousands of men, women, and children, as well as Dr. Lang, are capable of sighing after impossibilities; public esteem and thanks are reserved for the few who prosecute well devised and practicable plans.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT.—Saturday.

The Last Day of Term.

Before the three Judges.

ADMISSION OF ATTORNIES.

MR. CHARLES HAMILTON WALSH.

The Solicitor-General said, he had been requested by the Attorney-General, who could not appear to-day, to move that the above gentleman be admitted a solicitor, attorney, and proctor, of this honorable Court, reading an affidavit that he was admitted a solicitor, &c., of the Court of Exchequer, Ireland, in the year 1812, and that since his admission he had, according to the wish of a relation, dropped the name of "Walsh," being known since only by the name of Charles Hamilton.

The Court said, being satisfied with the identity of the gentleman, he might be admitted by whatever name he might like.

MR. RICHARD HOLDSWORTH.

Mr. Broadhurst moved that this gentleman be admitted a solicitor, attorney, and proctor, of this honorable Court, the affidavits showing that all the proceedings were regular.

Admitted.

MR. SAMUEL BENNY SERJEANT.

Mr. Lowe moved that this gentleman be admitted a solicitor, attorney, and proctor of this honorable Court, the affidavits showing that all the proceedings required by the rules of Court were regular.

Admitted.

THE QUEEN v. JOSEPH LONG INNES, ESQ.

Mr. Lowe moved for a rule nisi, calling upon Joseph Long Innes, Esq., a magistrate, to show cause why a mandamus should not issue from this Court, to compel him to hear the case of the Queen v. James Dole. Mr. Lowe said, the case arose out of the late election for the county, at which the defendant appeared to vote and did vote. The information before the magistrate charged the defendant with having answered the fourth question set forth in the 30th section of the Electoral Act, untruly. The fourth question was as follows,—"Have you the same qualification for which your name was originally inserted in the electoral roll for the district," &c.? Which the defendant answered in the affirmative, and which the information charged was contrary to the fact, as the defendant had since that electoral list was made up, parted with that identical freehold to another person. When the case came on before the above magistrate, the prosecuting attorney had proceeded with his evidence, proving clearly that two electors had caused the Returning Office to put the identical question to the defendant, and that he had answered it in the affirmative, and was proceeding to show that the defendant had, prior to the election, sold the property that gave him the qualification, when the magistrate interfered, and would not allow further evidence to be adduced, dismissing the case. The learned counsel said that this amounted to a clear obstruction of justice on the part of the magistrate; it was too bad that he should have stifled the case in this way. The magistrate ought to have heard the case out, and then dismissed it if he thought it not proved; but not before: this Court no doubt can grant a criminal information, and the Attorney-General can prosecute upon perusing the whole affidavits, but the latter would not act of course until the whole depositions were before him. An affidavit of excuse for coming on the last day of Term for a rule nisi was read.

The Court stopped Mr. Lowe, and the Chief Justice in granting the rule nisi, said, that it appeared to him, that the Returning Officer was not bound to put the question, unless required, to the defendant, but the defendant having answered it, he had waived any objection he might have had to the question, on the score that the preliminaries prior to the question being so put, under the act, had not been observed.

The rule was made returnable on the first day of next term.

EX PARTE THOMAS WHEATON BOWDEN, AN INSOLVENT.

This was a petition of appeal of the above insolvent to the full Court, seeking a reversal of a decision of the Chief Commissioner, refusing the insolvent absolutely his certificate. Before the Commissioner the opposing creditors filed four objections to the certificate being granted, two of them only were actually relied upon—one of these the Commissioner intimated was not made out to his satisfaction, and his judgment proceeded upon one only, viz., the having contracted debts without any reasonable or probable expectation of being able to pay them. A great deal of evidence was taken in the Court below, in substantiation of the several allegations, and all that, relating to the ground on which the refusal was based, was read to-day, occupying much time. It appeared that the insolvent commenced business as an ironmonger, so far back as eleven years ago, and was prosperous in that trade until about the time he commenced (in the beginning of the year 1847) the refining sugar on a large scale. About this time he owed £2000 on account of his ironmongery business. In October of the same year, he was pressed for the payment of the sum of £1200, all his property being then mortgaged for the sum of £7400. In the same month he contracted a debt of £2460 for sugar with Mr. Willis, now one of the opposing creditors, payable by notes at short dates. In the same month, he also contracted another debt for sugar with Thacker and Co., to the amount of £924, also at the same time, another debt to Rowand, Macnab, and Co. The first of the bills for these transactions became due in January, 1848. None of them were paid at maturity. Messrs. Thacker and Co., sued on their bills, and some arrangement was eventually made about them; the sugar, which had never been delivered, being sold at his risk. No sooner was the arrangement come to, than the insolvent bought sugars of Captain Towns to the amount of £1026 at credit, payable by short bills. The Commissioner, in his elaborate judgment, commented upon this debt, and said, "Can it be said that from such a state of circumstances, he (the insolvent) had any expectation of paying these bills to Towns, more especially when it was shown that the profit on the sugar manufacture was not equal to the expenditure, which was about £60 per month, and that a rival institution was underselling him? Captain Towns, it appears at the time of the contract, asked him about his circumstances, stating that it was a large purchase, and that he must be cautious about it; when his replies were such as to induce the credit being given to him; he not hinting in the slightest manner that he at that moment was liable for overdue bills to a large amount, that all his property was heavily mortgaged, that he had been threatened with actions, and that sugar which he had purchased he was unable to pay for, and had agreed that it should be sold at his risk, if not taken away at a limited time." On the 9th of June following, he contracted another debt, buying sugar of Mr. Donaldson to the value of £400, paying by bills of short date; and when asked, by the vendor, if anything had happened during these critical times, to make him the less able to pay, he replied "nothing whatever." A month after this last contract, the insolvent called together his creditors and offered 10s. in the pound. Another debt was also contracted in the April prior with Mr. Woolley, under circumstances almost similar to the last debt. The Commissioner said, that he was of opinion that the debts contracted with Towns, Woolley, and Donaldson, were also contracted without any reasonable or probable expectation of being able to pay them—and brought the insolvent's case within the meaning of the Act, and for these reasons, he felt constrained to refuse the insolvent his certificate.

The Solicitor-General appeared for the insolvent in support of his petition. He said the certificate had been refused on one ground only, and it was only with that therefore the Court had now to deal. He would contend the Commissioner had put a wrong construction upon the words of the section in respect of the ground relied on. He has held that debts contracted by the insolvent in the way of his business, come within the Act. This in England does not bring an unfortunate trader within the Act, unless there be actual fraud in the inception of the transaction. Again, too, the Commissioner has acted upon the whole evidence taken before him, and not merely upon that given by the now and then opposing creditors. He ought to have acted on the evidence of the opposing creditors only, and according to the way he contracted the debts with them ought the certificate to be granted or refused. Had he done this and now they ought to be so tested, the conclusion arrived at will be found to be most erroneous. It may be that the insolvent was a little embarrassed at the time he contracted the debts with the opposing creditors, but this is no reason why the certificate should be withheld. If it were held by this Court that because a man is a little embarrassed, he is at once to throw his estate into an Insolvent Court, there would be an end at once to all speculation and enterprise. It is the nature of all trades, that there should be occasionally times of depression; yet those engaged in them naturally look forward to better times, and continue in the hope, as they often do, that they will extricate themselves. It cannot be said, that debts incurred under such times of depression, that they are so incurred without any reasonable or probable expectation of paying them. The learned counsel begged to remind the Court that the circumstances of this colony are different from those of England—here there is no large market where great sums of money can be raised at once. Mercantile transactions here are not paid so punctually perhaps as in the mother country; but they are paid eventually, and with interest. Here the insolvent had large landed property, worth much more than it was mortgaged for, and he had every expectation that the profits from his sugar manufactory would have been great; they would have been so, had it not been for the extraordinary depression of the times, and that a rival establishment was underselling him. The evidence did not show that the insolvent was being sued, except in one instance; the creditors were satisfied with his efforts, they still trusted him. There were besides many redeeming circumstances in this case, that distinguished it from many others that had come before this Court, here there was no preference in any shape. One circumstance too worthy of some remark was, that the creditor's assignee, Mr. Donaldson, did not now come forward to oppose, and did not do so in the Insolvent Court, showing that he who must have known all the particulars of the insolvent's dealings was at least satisfied that he, the unfortunate, was entitled to his certificate. However, the debts were contracted for sugar, the raw material of his trade (not luxuries,) purchased at a fair price, and it must have been presumed that he had in the possession of them not only a reasonable and probable expectation of paying for them, but also of gaining a profit by the sale. He would submit, therefore, the certificate ought to have been granted.

Mr. Fisher appeared for the creditors in support of the Commissioner's decision. No doubt the facts of his learned friend had been most ingeniously dealt with; but he would not imagine, that the mind of the Court could even now be disturbed as to the correctness of the Commissioner's decision. It has been laid down by this Court, over and over again, that the Court will not overrule the Commissioner's decision, unless it can clearly see that that decision was wrong; if the Court even should be in a state of doubt, as to its correctness, then even the Court has said, it will uphold the decision. He would submit that it was impossible for this Court to say, looking at all the circumstances of the case, that that decision was wrong, the Court had therefore no other duty to perform, however painful, but to confirm it. It was clear upon the evidence, that the insolvent did not rely upon his landed property, as the means of extricating himself from his difficulties, or affording him the probable means of paying his debts contracted with the now opposing creditors. The landed property prior to these debts being contracted, was heavily mortgaged—almost to its full value, as the equity of redemption only subsequently fetched £85. It was argued on the other side, that there is no means in the colony for raising large sums of money—this, he would contend, was the very reason why all merchants and others should never carry on their trades with a false capital, and not when in debt. No merchant or tradesman should be recognised as worthy of his certificate, who fearlessly and recklessly carries on his trade as it may be through some fraud, trusting in the end that some lucky chance may bring him through. It was only necessary to look at the statements made by the insolvent when asked by his different creditors to see with what dishonesty he contracted his debts; and when comparing them with his position as to other debts and circumstances which he could not help knowing, to see what were his probable means of liquidating them.

The Solicitor-General replied, contending that the Act, under which the insolvent had been refused his certificate, conferred a new jurisdiction upon the Court; this circumstance, and another, that it was penal in its effect, would prove that the words of the Act must be construed most strictly—construing the words of the section in question (the 18th of the 7 Vic., No. 19,) most strictly, so far as it concerned the ground now under consideration, he would submit that the words would not bear the construction contended for on the other side, viz., that directly the debt is incurred, the party so incurring it must be in a position punctually to discharge it. The contrary was the true construction, and the legislature clearly meant by using the language it did, that if a party had a reasonable and probable expectation of paying it some time, his case was not to be within the section. The evidence would show that the insolvent, at the time he incurred the debts of the opposing creditors, had a reasonable and probable expectation to pay them—if not at the actual time they became due, yet he would be able to do so, upon time being given.

The Court reserved judgment.

DOUGLASS v. HORSBURGH.

This new trial motion was then called on, and the Court refused to grant a new trial. A note of the arguments and judgment will appear in to-morrow's impression.

To-day being the last day of term, the Court did not break up until a late hour.

The Nisi Prius Sittings will commence to-morrow. The following causes are in to-morrow's list:—Crisp and others v. Bell; Irving v. Sly; Doe dem. Harris v. M'Cabe; Pite and Preston v. Pearce; Doe dem. Morley v. Morrison.

MURDER OF A WIFE BY HER HUSBAND.—On the 14th of the present month, a female named Ann Earls, residing in Kent-street, made a complaint to Captain Innes of her husband William having, on the preceeding day, knocked her down with his fist, and threatened that he would take her life, and prayed that he might be held to keep the peace towards her. In consequence of this, a warrant was granted for his apprehension, and he was bailed out. On the 16th, Mrs. Earls went again to Captain Innes, and complained that when her case was called on against her husband, it was dismissed by the sitting magistrates in consequence of her non-appearance, which was caused by her husband having driven her away from the Police Office, and used threatening language towards her. Captain Innes then ordered the same warrant to be again executed; and the warrant having been in the first instance marked for bail if it was tendered, the watchhousekeeper again took bail for his appearance the next morning to answer the charge. It was about five o'clock in the evening when he was liberated on bail. On the 17th, Earls was again dismissed, no prosecutrix appearing against him. On the 25th, however, in consequence of information he had received, Captain Innes went to the residence of the prisoner, and saw Mrs. Earls there; she was in bed, and Mr. Montgomery, her medical attendant, was there; her husband also was there; Mrs. Earls was weak and exhausted, but perfectly sensible, and made a deposition to the effect that on Friday, the 21st instant, her husband struck her several violent blows with his fist on various parts of her body, and kicked her; from her languid state Captain Innes did not examine her so closely as he would otherwise have done, fearing it would prove injurious; she was however perfectly sane, and touched the pen to make her mark to the deposition. Her husband made some insolent observation when the deposition was read in his hearing. He was then taken into custody. Mrs. Earls lingered until about 12 on Thursday night, when she expired. An inquest was convened for Friday afternoon, which at six o'clock was adjourned until Saturday at 2 P.M. A number of witnesses were examined, who bore testimony to the fact of the prisoner having been for the past four or five years in the habit of ill using and beating the deceased; one witness expressed her belief that for at least a twelvemonth the prisoner had beat his wife (the deceased) every day of his life. The chief part of the evidence, however, was directed to an assault made on her by the prisoner on the night of the 16th instant, after he had been bailed out of custody, which had prevented her attendance at the Police Office on the 17th, (when the prisoner was a second time discharged in consequence of no prosecution, and since which the unfortunate deceased was not able to leave the house. Mr. Edward Wells deposed that he lived next door but one to the house occupied by the prisoner and his family; they had lived there about a month, and were continually quarrelling and calling each other names; they quarrelled on last Saturday week (the 14th instant) and struck at each other, but no blows were received by either, the deceased refused to go into the house, alleging that she feared the prisoner would kill her; on the following Monday (the 16th), about eleven o'clock, or later, at night, he (witness) heard the deceased screaming, and calling out "Don't beat me, William;" he then heard her groan, and say "You've settled me this time;" witness heard a noise as if of blows with the fist, and with a stick, and of kicks; he also heard two heavy falls; the prisoner asked deceased for some keys, and told her to get up; she said she could not get up, to which the prisoner replied, "I'll make you," at the same time using very ill language, this lasted about a quarter of an hour, after which witness heard no more noise; he was standing under the verandah, and from the shuffling noise he was of opinion that the prisoner did get the deceased up, and then either drop or knock her down. On cross-examination by the prisoner, the witness said that on Monday, the 16th, he was with him in the yard of the Police Office, and the deceased was just turning the corner from Druitt-street towards the Police Office, when he (prisoner) said with an oath, "Here she's coming," and then went to meet her, and forced her to return home; soon afterwards the case was called on, it was dismissed for want of prosecution; it was the night of that day the beating took place; the witness was in the verandah and heard that when he (the prisoner) let the deceased down, he kicked her. Captain Innes deposed to the granting of the warrant, and to the taking of deceased's deposition on the 25th; during his eleven years' experience in Sydney, he never saw a person of worse appearance; she was emaciated, bruised all over, and evidently sinking very fast. The deposition taken at this time by Captain Innes had reference to an assault by the prisoner subsequent to that deposed to by Wells—namely, on Friday, the 20th. Mr. Henry Atchison Montgomery, medical practitioner, deposed that on Tuesday, the 17th instant, he was fetched by the prisoner to attend his wife, who he said had fallen down while drunk and hurt herself; she complained of difficulty of breathing, and general debility, there were marks of injuries on her chest and side, and at the extremity of the abdomen; he took some blood, and gave her some medicine; she said nothing as to the manner of the injuries, except, on his pressing her right side, she whispered that he (meaning the prisoner, of whom she appeared to be afraid) had given her a kick in the lower part of the abdomen; he examined her extremities and abdomen, and there was scarcely a spot on which he could put his finger, but exhibited marks of violence, discoloration, and scars; kicking, bruising, and knocking, would produce such appearances; he attended deceased until her death, on Thursday night last; prisoner was very inattentive to her, and left her in a state of perfect destitution, notwithstanding the repeated remonstrances of witness; on one occasion the prisoner replied that he would not allow a medical man to enter the house but for fear he might get into trouble about her—else, she might take her chance. It was impossible that the injuries inflicted on the deceased could have been received by her in the manner stated by the prisoner: they are to be attributed to kicks, blows, and cuts. Some injuries were inflicted on the left side of her head between the interval of witness having been first called to attend her, and the taking of her deposition by Captain Innes on the 25th. Dr. Tierney deposed that he was called in to see the deceased on Wednesday afternoon last, and found her in a very bad and weak state, and nearly delirious. Dr. Tierney then proceeded to describe an almost incredible number of wounds, bruises, abrasions, &c., on every part of the unfortunate woman, from head to foot, many of them of long standing, and many others of recent infliction. He saw she was in a dying state, and called in Dr. M'Ewen to see her, in conjunction with whom, after her decease, he made a post mortem examination of the body. From that examination he had no doubt that death was caused by violence. Dr. M'Ewen's evidence was very similar to that of Dr. Tierney, but as to unprofessional readers it would not be very instructive or interesting, it would be useless to give the testimony of either gentleman in detail. The Coroner proceeded very lucidly to place the evidence before the Jury, in which he said, he could not find anything which would justify him in charging them to find a verdict of manslaughter. The habitual ill-treatment to which it had been proved the prisoner had subjected the deceased had, no doubt, caused her premature death. The conduct of the prisoner, as set forth in the evidence, he could not but characterize as the most unfeeling, inhuman, and ferocious, that had come under his observation, and he believed was unparalleled in the annals of the colony. The Jury retired for about half an hour, and then came into Court with a verdict of "wilful murder against William Earls," who was thereupon committed on the coroner's warrant to take his trial for the offence. The inquest occupied three hours on Friday, and six on Saturday, during the whole of which time the Court was crowded with auditors, who frequently could not refrain from an expression of feeling either at the statement of the witnesses, or of the cool barbarity with which the prisoner in cross-examination of the witnesses seemed to treat the affair as one of no particular moment.

CITY ASSESSMENT.—List of appellants against the assessment in Phillip Ward, who will be heard in support of their appeals by the City Council, on Monday, the 30th instant, at three o'clock P.M.:—W. B. Allen, George Atherden, John Brown, David Clifton, William Costello, John Davies, John Dalley, Francis Downes, John Elcomb, Jeremiah Evans, William Imber, William Farrell, P. Frost, George Fullerton, Michael Golden, John Hamilton, John Higgins, H. J. Hayes, H. Hollinshed, Robert Hancock, G. Jilks, P. Hanslow, Charles Jenkins, John Kettle, W. A. B. Lea, Thomas Lee, Jane Morgan, Alexander M'Intosh, Joseph Myles, Francis M'Mahon, J. S. Murray, R. W. Moore, Thomas M'Guire, Thomas Marsh, Henry Moston, Benjamin Morris, Thomas May, John Neale, William Sullivan, Mary Power, John Purchase, Samuel Power, Jane Passfield, James Powell, Peter Paulus, James Paterson, Michael Riley, John W. Russell, Thomas Ryan, Charles Selwin, W. S. Sutton, John Sharkey, E. Thompson, D. Tierney, John Taylor, John Taggart, James Vinn, Phillip Whelan, William Walsh, John Willoughby, and F. L. Wallace.

ANTI-TRANSPORTATION.—A meeting was held on Friday evening, at Mr. Finn's, Pelican Inn, South Head Road, to form a Ward Committee for Cook Ward. The room was crowded, with Mr. J. R. Wilshire in the chair. Resolutions concurring in the necessity of a great public demonstration, and making the appointment of a Ward Committee, were passed by acclamation. Thirty-five citizens gave their names on the Committee, and after the dispersion of the meeting they elected a Chairman, and commenced making arrangements for effecting the object of the evening's meeting.

OBSTRUCTING THE CLERK OF THE CAMPBELL-STREET MARKETS.—On Thursday last, James Moor (who on the 8th instant was convicted of an assault on Mr. M'Laughlin, the Clerk of the Campbell-street Markets, and sentenced to pay a fine of £5), appeared at the Police Office to answer the complaint of Mr. Bernard M'Laughlin for obstructing him in the execution of his duty. Mr. Brenan appeared for the complainant, and Mr. Redman for the defendant. Mr. Brenan, in stating the case to the Bench (Aldermen Thurlow and Brown), said that the circumstances of the case were precisely the same in this as in the assault case, for which the defendant had been fined a few days back, but that this information was filed under the 19th section of the By-laws for the Regulation of the Markets, by which it was laid down that any person convicted of obstructing any clerk of the market in the execution of his duty, should be liable to pay at the direction of the Justices, any sum not exceeding £5, over and above any fine, or penalty, or punishment, that may be awarded against such offender for any assault simultaneously committed. Mr. Brenan called Mr. M'Laughlin, who deposed that he was on the day named in the information, the 13th April, the Clerk of the Hay, Corn, and Cattle Market, and produced his appointment. Mr. Redman then perused the document; after which he said that in order to save the time of the Court he would at once take an objection, which he thought would be fatal to the case. The document now produced, he submitted, completely put the complainant out of Court, inasmuch as it purported to be an appointment made by the Mayor, of Bernard M'Laughlin to the office of Clerk of the Market, whereas according to the 8th section of the By-laws, the Council only had that authority. Unless, therefore, the other side were prepared to prove that the complainant was the clerk of the Market appointed by the City Council, the information must fall through, for it was evident that Mr. M'Laughlin was not yet legally appointed to the office, and therefore could not in law be obstructed in the duties of that office. Mr. Brenan having replied, the Bench were of opinion that the objection was fatal, but would take time to consider before giving their decision. The case was therefore postponed until Saturday. Accordingly on Saturday the case was again called on, and their Worships dismissed the information on the objection taken.

EVER OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC, ON THE RILEY ESTATE.

MR. STUBBS is instructed by the proprietor, Mr. Scott, to sell by public auction, on the ground,
THIS DAY, APRIL 30,
At one o'clock precisely,
ALL THOSE NEW BRICK AND STONE BUILT PREMISES, situate in Bourke-street, adjoining the houses of Messrs. Taylor and Clegg, near the corner of the South Head Road, opposite the New Court House.
☞ Cards to view to be had by applying to the Auctioneer.
They consist of a house and shop 22 feet long, with neat sitting-room behind, kitchen, yard, stable, coach-house, and other conveniences for carrying on a respectable business on the street floor; together with four very nice rooms on the second floor, and verandahs both in front and rear.
Also,
A VERY WELL FINISHED COTTAGE, with upper verandah, now producing 6s. per week, (worth 9s.) having three rooms and a kitchen, and well of excellent water.

Bourke-street is in a very flourishing and improving part of the city; confirmed by the fact that none of the original allotments are now to be had, and property all along the frontage of it is daily rising in value.
For healthiness of situation and beauty of scenery it is not to be surpassed in the vicinity of Sydney.

TO THE MONEYED FOLKS OF SYDNEY, AND CAPITALISTS IN THE COUNTRY.
POSITIVE SALE.
FIRST-RATE PREMISES,
THE MAYOR INN, PITT-STREET.

MR. STUBBS is favoured with instructions from the respective proprietors, to sell by public auction,
ON TUESDAY NEXT, MAY 1,
ON THE GROUND,
At twelve o'clock precisely,
All those central Sydney business premises, known as
"THE MAYOR INN."
Now in the occupation of Mr. Joseph Smith and others, and producing in round numbers

The premises let to Mr. Smith .... £145 per annum.
One Cottage at the back, let to Mr. Stringer .... £15 12s. ditto.
Two Cottages in the rear, let to Messrs. Reardon and Ching Chong .... £26 ditto.
The genuine value of the Mayor Inn is well known, being situate in the GREAT THOROUGHFARE OF PITT-STREET, within a few yards of THE VICTORIA THEATRE,
where, to get hold of good income property, is talked about like a prize in a lottery. It stands upon an area of about 6750 SQUARE FEET OF LAND,
having 45 feet of frontage to Pitt-street, by about 150 feet in depth, more or less, and it comes recommended with that which everybody cannot give now-a-days, i.e.,
A FIRST RATE TITLE, and there is every reason to believe that it will be eagerly sought after by every capitalist in Sydney, the Conditions and Terms of which will be notified on the day of sale.
NOTE.—Property in Pitt and George-streets maintains a proud superiority over every other interest in the colony, and the bona fide capitalist is particularly invited to bear in mind, that the property now offered for sale is daily increasing in value, and is precisely what is suited to his wishes; it might be made to compass all the requisites of ANOTHER ENTWISLE'S,
and to rival every other establishment in Sydney. 6838
